AVIATORS CAN'T EQUAL BIRDS

Feathered Flyers Make Wonderful Flight and Altitude Records.
Although of recent years aviation has made such tremendous strides, the feats of present day aviators can not be compared with those of nature's fliers—the birds, in speed, endurance, lifting and sighting power, birds beat aviators every time.

A common swallow, for instance, can travel in the air at the rate of 120 miles an hour. The vulture when swooping on its prey cuts through the atmosphere at nearly 150 miles an hour.

Some time ago a swallow flew from Antwerp to Compelgne, a distance of 140 miles in 68 minutes, the flight being timed by observers, who returned the bird's average rate of speed at 128 miles an hour.

The fastest airplane has ever traveled is 108 miles an hour, and by this speed was only obtained by building a little "beak machine," terribly dangerous to handle.

Then, again, birds can fly for 24 hours at a stretch without descending, even in boisterous weather. After eight or nine hours' continued flying, an aviator is, worn out both mentally and bodily, and if he had strong winds to fight, he is often in a state of collapse.

No flier could carry out long flights across the sea, and land like a cuckoo, for instance, which, any naturalist will tell you, often start from English shores, and find their way to Africa.

At a height of 10,000 feet, the earth in detail is most difficult for an aviator to see, and it is only with strong glasses that he can discern even large buildings and rivers. But at high altitudes, hawks and kites can spy tiny lizards and field mice on the earth, for their sighting powers are 20 times stronger than those of aviators.

His Luck Turned.
Andrew Carnegie, at a dinner in New York, said of the war:

"The trouble with the war is its positively infernal cruelty. Some things are cruel on one side and kind on the other, but war is cruel on both sides."

"War, reminds me of a butcher whose wife, three times in succession ran down people and had to pay damages."

"Well, one day, when the lady was out bicycling as usual, a boy came rushing into the butcher's shop in great excitement."

"What's the matter?" shouted the butcher. "Has my wife run somebody down again?"

"No," gasped the boy, she's been run down herself by Banker Wright, in his automobile."

"Thank goodness," said the butcher; my luck's changed at last!"—Washington Star.
